Here Is the Second in a Startling Series of Articles Which Raise This Question: "Does Man Gain by Marriage?" Anonymous Writer Draws Contrast Between the Wife of Man's Ideal and the Woman He Weds

The Boston American publishes today the second portion of an article by an anonymous writer signing himself "I. O. U." The article, entitled "Man's Profit and Loss Through Marriage," is remarkable because of the fact that the writer—presumably to be a woman by the many delicate touches that only a feminine mind or hand could give—takes up the subject in behalf of the married man.

A startling attitude is taken by the writer throughout the article—an attitude that, whether right or wrong, is sure to cause thoughtful discussion. The first portion of the article was published on Saturday. In that the writer told of overhearing a conversation between a bachelor and a married man, the latter revealing how his wife ruled him.

NUMBER 12
By "I. O. U."
I LEFT the wife of my bachelor, shaking from the husband who was sitting next to me, "Oh, yes, I'm glad I'm married. The wedding looks for me, and the married man was glowing when he gave his answer."

Married for Companion
Her face is clean and shining, devoid of wrinkles. For every rigorous man late in life, she is trained to regard him differently. She is bright, interesting, clever, kind, beautiful, healthy, and all other commendable.

What Is the Return?
And when we get right down to it, what do you give your husband, madam, in return for all this?

Too Many Idle Women
Any man, at least, a cheerful, loving, generous companion? We're not talking of course, of the kind of wife who is a burden and a nuisance to her husband and his family. They are not talking of the kind of wife who is a burden and a nuisance to her husband and his family.

Selfish Wives Many
And you may not believe it, but the words are full of wisdom. And what, I repeat, are we giving those husbands in return?

As He Expected It
The wife of my bachelor, shaking from the husband who was sitting next to me, "Oh, yes, I'm glad I'm married. The wedding looks for me, and the married man was glowing when he gave his answer."

Is Big-Heartedness the Most Desirable Quality in a Wife?

By Dorothy Dix

SHOULD a man marry a woman because she is all heart? I understand some men marry for this reason that for any other. If a wife's big heart is one of a hundred could be persuaded to let the truth, they would admit that it is not much because they were in love with some special beauty, or because the lady was in love with him.

Love Not Enough
A woman who has a big heart is a woman who is not only big-hearted, but also big-brained. She is a woman who is not only big-hearted, but also big-brained. She is a woman who is not only big-hearted, but also big-brained.

Flattering to Man
No one will dispute that it is very flattering to a man to feel that his wife is big-hearted. But it is not only flattering to a man to feel that his wife is big-hearted, but it is also flattering to a woman to feel that her husband is big-hearted.

JOE GANS STARTS WORK FOR BOUT WITH MEMSIC

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—Joe Gans felt any better he would be afraid of a fight at "at home" today. A crowd of 1,000 people gathered to see the colored champion through his first day of hard work. Gans and Williams, Boston, fought four rounds in the afternoon, at 11 o'clock. Gans won by a knockout in the fourth round. Williams was knocked out in the fourth round. Gans won by a knockout in the fourth round.

MAN WITH THE PUNCH IS THE MAN WHO WINS SAYS JOHN L. SULLIVAN

No. 4 Sullivan Series

John L. Sullivan, for ten years champion of America and the man that invented the knockout punch with the glove hand, has written a series of articles for the BOSTON AMERICAN, of which this is the fourth, on the REAL knockout punches of life. His declaration is that the real knockout punches are not delivered with the fist, but come in different forms altogether. In this article he dilates on the importance of "spitting back" and "taking the knockout punch" is his advice.

By John L. Sullivan.

In all of the words of advice and counsel I have had in previous articles in the present series I have attempted to show you that the everyday life that we are living through is little more than a succession of battles, but that these battles are won or lost by the way we live.

It has been pointed out to me with force that the knockout punch is not always delivered with the fist, but comes in different forms altogether. In this article he dilates on the importance of "spitting back" and "taking the knockout punch" is his advice.

Don't spit with life. Fight with life. Don't spit with life. Fight with life. Don't spit with life. Fight with life.

Keep on slugging at close range until you get something.

THE MAN WITH THE PUNCH IS THE MAN WHO WINS

The fellow who is always well prepared to fight is the man who will win a big majority of his battles and therefore of his life.

Don't think that I am not an admirer of an soldier of the corner man, but the man who combines his cleverness with a big punch, in the man who has more power than the other man, and who is a clever fellow who depends upon light blows to attain his ends in life.

Slugging, when viewed merely as a sport and not as a means to an end, is a game. It is a game, and it is a game that is played in a certain degree of skill.

If the slugging man is not quick and not his opponent down, he must keep on slugging until he gets the best of the fight.

DECEPTION NEVER WINS.

YOU MUST HAVE THE GOODS

Just the same way and nothing more or less in ordinary life. The fellow who has a good punch, and who is a clever fellow, will win a big majority of his battles and therefore of his life.
